

Credible evidence, stronger supply chains

WEBINAR

28 May 2025 | 11:00-12:30 CEST / 10:00-11:30 BST

You have the map for socially responsible public procurement, but is the compass working properly? What information do you need to get you to your destination, and is it reliable?

About the webinar

The first of two online workshops on credible evidence, this webinar will offer practical advice and tools to enable you to demand more reliable information and better due diligence from your suppliers.

Speakers will guide you through the different kinds of information that you request from your suppliers to demonstrate that they comply with socially responsible public procurement requirements. The interactive format will include presentations, practical examples and exercises, with opportunities for you to share information and get advice.

Who should attend

The webinar is not limited to a specific sector, and is relevant to everyone responsible for public procurement at all stages of the contract cycle.

What you will learn

Electronics Watch staff with decades of experience will provide practical advice on how you can review and evaluate the credibility of:

- Self-assessment questionnaires
- ESG risk providers
- Certifications and labels
- Modern Slavery / Human Rights Statements
- Other sources of information (e.g. media or NGO reports, engaging with third parties).

You will learn to evaluate the strengths and weaknesses of different types of evidence, and what questions or additional proof you might ask for from your suppliers to demonstrate that they will meet their contractual obligations on forced labour, modern slavery and other local and international labour standards.

This webinar is part of the Knowledge Building Series. To find out more, please contact:

- Cindy Berman: cberman@electronicswatch.org
- Haëndila Varela: hvarela@electronicswatch.org